

RILEY GOODMAN

TO CULTIVATE A MAGNOLIA

PINK GALLERY

JULY 15TH - SEPTEMBER 11TH

“2022 marks my eighth year living in Richmond, Virginia- four spent in undergrad at VCUarts, and now four as an emerging artist. I never imagined the impact that coming of age in this city would afford me. Richmond became a shelter to take refuge in as I endured the universally difficult journey of leaving my childhood home for the first time. To live in Richmond, a city alive with its own history, is to be surrounded by generations who called it home before me. Glints of afternoon sunlight create movie-like sets in hundred year old apartment buildings, jazz music radiates from an indiscernible car, someone’s initials have been carved into your basement door- everything brushes the threshold of reality and fiction, our present only a continuation of the movie the city has been directing for over three hundred years. It is the almost indescribable everyday magic of Richmond that has allowed me to become the photographer and person I am today. To Cultivate A Magnolia, an ongoing series, examines the folklore and history of Richmond and greater Virginia, the endurance of the American Civil War, and the complicated, dreamy journey of one’s coming of age.”
